DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-5, 12-14, 50, 52, 73, 74, 82, 84, 86, 88-91, 102, 104-108 and 110-125 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Abo et al in view of Ishida.

Claims 1, 12, 82 and 84: Hull discloses an information processing apparatus (10) embodying a program of instructions adapted to exchange information with a second information processing apparatus (see FIG 1) comprising input device means for capturing information (20), comprising memory means for storing the captured information (24), acquisition circuit means (22) for acquiring data associated with said captured information, on the basis of said information, and display means (30) for displaying the acquired data (col 1 line 66-col 2 line 63).

Hull fails to disclose time information, however the use of a time stamp in a camcorder was a notoriously well-known feature at the time of the invention, and as such the examiner takes Official Notice of such a feature, asserting that it would have been obvious to use such a known feature in Hull.

Art Unit: 2682

Claim 2: Hull discloses means to transmit the data to the other device through a cellular network, as well as means to receive said data from the other device (col 1 lines 43-53).

Claims 3 and 14: Hull discloses that the acquired information is stored in a memory (24).

Claims 4 and 73: the inventions of claims 4 and 73 are the method inherently performed by the apparatus invention of claims 1 and 12, and as such is rejected using the same reasoning as set forth above.

Claim 5: while Abo discloses a transmission medium and a controller 23 inherently using a program, but fails to disclose that the program may be sent via the medium, such was notoriously well known in the art at the time of the invention, and as such Official Notice of such a feature is taken. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to allow the mobile to be programmable, as such allows the mobile software to be updated without needing to bring the mobile into a physical location.

Claims 13, 86, 88 and 90: please see the rejection of claim 2 above.

Claims 50 and 52: Hull discloses that the radio connection is a cellular telephone connection.

Claim 74: the use of a floppy disk would have been an obvious choice for the device, as such is portable.

Claims 89 and 91: Hull discloses that the radio connection is a cellular telephone connection. Claims 102 and 108: Hull discloses that the user initiates the capture, which would inherently use a button. Claims 104 and 110: Hull discloses a cellular phone, which includes a microphone. Claims 105-107 and 111-113: the use of a common hiding circuit would have been an obvious addition to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention since such would provide more security for said captured information. Claims 114-117: Hull discloses that the other device may be a network device, which would inherently include a computer/database.

Claim 118: Hull discloses an information processing apparatus (10) comprising a recording device (20) for recording information, a memory for storing said information, and a circuit to acquire said information and display it on a display (col 1 line 66-col 2 line 62). Hull fails to mention that the information is associated with played music, however, using the camera to record music, for example, a live show, would have been an obvious use of a camera to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention.

Claim 119: the use of a time stamp in a camcorder was a notoriously well-known feature at the time of the invention, and as such the examiner takes Official Notice of such a feature, asserting that it would have been obvious to use such a known feature in Hull. Claim 120: the images recorded in Hull relate to the music as it is part of the recording. Claim 121: Hull discloses a telephone circuit 28. Claim 122: Hull discloses means to receive said information from the camera and transmit it via radio (26, 28).

Claims 123 and 124: a record button would be inherent in the camera of Hull. Claim 125: Hull discloses a cellular device, inherently comprising a microphone.

Allowable Subject Matter

3. Claims 56, 57, 64 and 65 are allowed.
4. Claims 103, 109 and 126-135 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter:

Claims 56, 57, 64 and 65 all teach towards an information processing apparatus comprising means for capturing and storing information, means for acquiring data associated with said captured information on the basis of said information, and means for displaying the acquired data, wherein the data includes a song title, a singer's name, a composer's name, a songwriter's name or a genre.

Claims 103, 109 and 126-135 all teach towards a means for capturing information including time information with a memory means and means for acquiring and displaying data associated with the recorded data, wherein the time information corresponds to a time when music is playing and the information acquired is associated with the music.

Response to Arguments

5. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-5, 12-14, 50, 52, 74, 82, 86, 88-91 and 112-117 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
